Jesus told Peter, James, and John, "Do not be afraid; from now on you will catch men." They left everything and followed Him.

Later, a man with leprosy came to Jesus, begging to be healed. Jesus touched him and healed him, telling him to show himself to the priest.

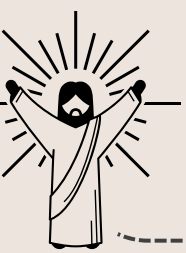

Crowds came to Jesus for healing, but He often withdrew to lonely places to pray.

After teaching, Jesus told Peter to let down his nets for a catch, even though Peter had already worked all night and caught nothing.

Jesus forgave the man's sins, and when the Pharisees questioned His authority, He healed the man to show His power to forgive sins.

Some men brought a paralyzed man to Jesus, lowering him through the roof of a house because of the crowd.
